

agInnovation Northeast

Heather Darby

Extension Professor

University of Vermont Extension

University of Vermont

Dr. Heather Darby is an Agronomist and Soil Specialist with the University of Vermont Extension. For over two decades Heather has worked collaboratively with farmers in the Northeast to develop practical agronomic solutions that are economic and environmentally viable. Darby has an integrated applied research, education, and extension program that covers a broad area of topics all focused on the needs of the agricultural community.